

IRRV chooses Nelson Croom to provide Distance Learning Online

Nelson Croom has been selected to create the Institute of Revenues, Rating and Valuation new distance learning online resource.

The IRRV is moving its QCA accredited qualification online in a bid to improve quality and cost-effectiveness. Following a competitive tender process the IRRV chose Nelson Croom as its distance learning partner.

“We’re delighted to be embarking on this new venture with the IRRV. We’ve worked with a number of clients to help them convert their printed distance learning materials into interactive and engaging online learning and it’s very exciting that the IRRV have chosen us to do the same for them. We started working with the team there in 2003 on the successful Euclidian suite of training programmes, and we’re sure that they’ll experience the same success with moving their distance learning online.” says Alan Nelson, Managing Director of Nelson Croom.

IRRV Distance Learning Online is currently in development and the first phase will be released in January 2009.
